LET SPORTS REPLACE MILITARY TRAINING

By Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman

A committee of the World Education Association which for two years has been studying the problem of military training, presented in its reports two important recommendations which merit wide publicity. The first was "that systematic and technical military training shall not be given in any civil educational institution in the world to youths under the age of eighteen years," and the other was "that no institution make military training a compulsory subject on the curricula." The chairman of this committee was Mr. E. J. Sainsbury, of Surrey, England. In giving his report, he pointed out very clearly that the physical values of military drill can be acquired more effectively through sports and its moral values through countless other channels, without indirectly nourishing the military ideal. This report was referred to the next convention for final action. The opposition to it, according to newspaper reports, was voiced by Canadian, American and British delegates, particularly by individuals in whose educational organizations some military training was featured.

I regret exceedingly that the conference deferred endorsing this report. Its substance is not novel to educators. All the virtues of military training can be acquired as well if not better through other ways. The recipients of military training are unconsciously being impressed with the philosophy that wars are moral, necessary and inevitable. It is that philosophy which true education seeks to combat, and it is therefore regrettable that the conference did not wholeheartedly endorse the resolution at once, without waiting for its next session.

Educators realize that the peace of the world is now in the hands of their pupils. All the influences brought to bear on the school children of to-day will have their fruition in the next generation. The peace of the world depends on the attitudes developed in the youth. Military training does not aid in producing the peace attitude. It fosters the war spirit, the spirit so completely repudiated by the educators in all their deliberations. Military training produces no patriotic values which cannot be inculcated better in other fashions. It is of little actual military value. More can be learned in one week in a military training camp than in nine years in a public school cadet corps. Military training should certainly be abolished in the elementary and high schools.

We may preach peace in churches and synagogues. We may bring pious prayers heavenwards imploring that God keep war far from us. We may pass peace resolutions and organize peace societies. As long as we hold up before children the military ideal, our peace preachments, peace prayers, resolutions and organizations are valueless. The child quickly sees the hypocrisy of prayers for peace and continuous military training. In military drill, children are being trained to kill efficiently. Before such training, pious imprecations appear empty and shadowy. Those who sincerely want the peace of the world must work for the abolition of military training in schools.

DR. MORRIS SCHWARTZ

He is dead.

The news travelled through Toronto fast. Gasps. Astonishment. Horror. It was unbelievable. And his intimate friends were stricken numb. Could not grasp the situation. Schwartz was not meant to die at this stage. If there is any logic in life, any sense of the fitness of things, it was unthinkable in the scheme of Schwartz's circumstances that he should drop out. Too many strings of interest, of responsibility, hopes, yearnings, dreams, were knotted about him to be severed suddenly. And the loose ends hanging all around. Ridiculous. A travesty.

Somewhere in Windsor or Detroit this man Schwartz passed the last three or four years of his life. He had many acquaintances in Toronto. He had a few very, very close friends. To these he was always a fragrant memory, a pleasant thought. Life is full of hardness, meanness, disgusting pettiness. But there was Morris Schwartz. His enthusiasm, his naïveté, his grand flourish, his stimulating pessimism, his radiant goodness. Well, there was one man worth while. Even after he had left our city he remained an influence among the inner circle of his friends, a rarefied presence.

Judged by the proper standards, Schwartz was one of the choicest and rarest spirits in Canadian Jewry. To the many he was known as a Zionist and a man about town. Graceful, charming of manner, refined of taste, he appeared as a delightful dilettante. But that was only the superficial, external view of the man.

He was a Zionist. He attended meetings. He occupied office. He held his hand out to beg for money. There are many such Zionists. They are labeled thus. The public knows them as members of a species. But have these the sentience to the thrill of a great ideal? What does it mean to be a Zionist? Is it not to be conscious of the identity of the self with a large thing known as a nation? To feel one's being merging in harmony with the pulsing being of a vast group, carrying on for generations and centuries. Schwartz was a Zionist. The ideal was to him a tragedy and a glory. He knew that his own spirit was absorbed in the larger spirit of the movement. He belonged to it. He could not extricate himself from it. The gayety and freshness of life around him tempted him. But he was a slave. His every fibre was commandeered by the ideal. But he felt, too, the exaltation of working for a great cause. He knew the joy that comes to the man who sees with universal eyes, and serves a grand destiny.

Came a time when Schwartz's Zionism would not let him rest here, away from the scene of Jewish redemption. He yearned for the echoes of his nation's past, and the songs of the new life. So he went to Palestine. Domestic responsibilities tugged at him in Canada. He struggled against these. The beauty of Jewish creativeness in Palestine lured him and held him in thrall. He came back to Canada brokenhearted. It is many years since he has been back. The last reports of him were that he was still talking and raving about Palestine, dreaming of going back to seek salvation.

This was Zionism. This was a Zionist! Is it not this type of enthusiast that makes a community rich?

N. Dizengoff, formerly Mayor of Tel Aviv, resigned from his position as member of the Zionist Executive in Palestine, where he was in charge of the Department of Urban Colonization. No reason for the resignation is given.

The fifteenth anniversary of the formation of the Agudas Israel was celebrated by gatherings in various cities of Europe where the Agudah has branches. The organization was formed at a meeting of orthodox leaders held at Kattowitz on June 12, 1922.

THE ATMOSPHERE IN PALESTINE BEGINNING TO CLEAR

The earthquake shock had a stunning effect on the population of Palestine and the subsequent few tremors still further increased the fear and the panic, so that matters for several weeks were at a standstill. Many people were afraid to stay in their houses over night and the public places and markets served as sleeping quarters to thousands of Arabs and others who were so thoroughly frightened by the shock. The hospitals were full with wounded and maimed and the wailing of the Arab women who lost relatives in the quake was constant and heartrending for several days. The post offices and the telegraph offices did a lively business. Thousands of messages from tourists to their relatives at home went through these offices.

It is now expected that lively building activities will soon begin throughout Palestine, as a result of the damage done by the quake. While the greatest damage is recorded in the Arab villages, where the houses were old and rickety, the Jewish settlements, especially in the old portion of Jerusalem and other larger towns, suffered greatly. In Tiberias, 150 Jewish houses crumbled, while the Government condemned hundreds of houses throughout the country. Many of the poorer classes of Jews remained practically roofless and destitute and the need for immediate relief is most urgent. But this condition is also a blessing in disguise, since hundreds of unemployed will find work in the buildings which will have to go up now.

The "Daily Express" of London came out again with a violent attack on the Zionist administration and with the demand that England should give up the mandate and especially the idea of creating a Jewish National Home in Palestine. Dr. Weizmann sent a lengthy reply to the journal in which he points out that while the conditions in Palestine are not as brilliant now as they were in 1925, the description of the depression in the "Daily Express" was greatly exaggerated. In his reply, Dr. Weizmann appears to be concerned chiefly to prove to the British taxpayer that the mandate over Palestine is no drain upon Great Britain's financial resources and that very little of the taxes go toward defraying the expense of maintaining Palestine.

The Jewish Communities Ordinance was promulgated in Jerusalem. It provides for the existence of only one Jewish community in each place, but allows for the establishment of autonomous congregations within the general Jewish community, with their own Shechitah and burial arrangements. It also allows for secession from the general Jewish community. The Agudas Israel leaders in Palestine held a mass meeting to protest against this ordinance demanding the right to establish separate communities under the act. Cablegrams expressing their protests and demands were dispatched to the British Colonial Office and to Colonel R. S. Symes, acting high commissioner.

Miss Frankel, the secretary of Jacobus N. Kann, well-known Dutch banker and Zionist leader, was appointed Dutch Consul in Jerusalem during the absence of Mr. Kann, the occupant of the post, who is away on a leave of absence.

The International Federation of Trade Unions, which held its Congress in Paris last week, included representatives also from Palestine, the only Asiatic country represented at the Congress. It was reported that Palestine has now 18,663 Jewish workers affiliated with the International.

LONDON UNITED SYNAGOGUE REFUSES TO LEVY FOR ZIONISM

At a recent meeting of the Council of the United Synagogue of England the question about allowing a minimum voluntary levy of five shillings to be placed to the debit of every member of a synagogue in behalf of the Keren Hayesod every half year was brought up for discussion. The executive committee ruled against it, since the purpose of the fund is not within the objects of the United Synagogue and therefore it would be against the laws of that body to levy such an assessment. This brought forth considerable discussion and the members of the executive were charged with bad faith in dealing with this question. The chairman ruled that the matter may be brought up again at a future meeting for consideration.

The question as to whether women may be allowed to vote in synagogue councils, which has been decided in the negative at an earlier meeting will probably be brought up again. An organizing committee for securing the women's franchise is in existence and is watching its opportunity for forcing this matter to the attention of the individual synagogues. For the present all that they desire is that women obtain the right to vote, for which they have the authority of the Chief Rabbi that this was not opposed to Jewish law and tradition. It is expected, however, that when this right is secured for them an authoritative statement will be secured for permitting women to hold executive offices in the councils of the synagogues, when the movement will assume a wider proportions.

The Municipality of Düsseldorf is offering a prize for a model for a Heine monument to be erected in that town in connection with the exhibition of German art that will be held there next year.

The Jewish population of Ukraine has increased during the past four years 7.6 per cent., while the non-Jewish population increased only by 4.6 per cent. In his last will, the late Lord Swaythling appeals to his children to remain loyal to the Jewish faith and not to intermarry. The bulk of his estate, estimated at two million dollars, goes to his family. A bequest of $60,000 is made to his son, Ivor, who recently married a poor girl, against the wishes of the family.

The new Polish Consul in Palestine made a tour of the Jewish colonies and he was warmly received by the colonists, especially by those hailing from Poland. The Polish Minister of Foreign Affairs issued a special statement, emphasizing the fact that the Polish Jews in Palestine maintain a warm affection for their fatherland, as manifested in the reception accorded by them to the Consul.

William Perez, a grandson of the famous Yiddish writer, J. L. Perez, became converted to Catholicism. It is said that this action was due to the resentment felt by Perez against the Warsaw Jewish community for refusing to grant a subvention to his grandmother, the widow of the writer, who was for many years the secretary of the Warsaw Jewish community.

The discovery of a rich store of early Israelite pottery by the Mizpah expedition of the Pacific School of Religion under Prof. William C. Bade, has resulted in a decision to extend the operations of the expedition into the summer. In an area adjacent to the ancient Semitic temple found ten days ago, the expedition discovered two closed rock-hewn cisterns.

By an order of the Prefect of Milan, all revolutionary epitaphs must be erased from tombstones in the province. Also, the Podesta, which settles municipal affairs, has ordained that all Scriptural passages must have their source named on the stone. A commission consisting of a rabbi, a Catholic priest and an evangelical pastor has been named to survey the quotations.

FOUR IN-ONE AS-A LOCK
AS A MUD HOOK
FOR CHANGING YOUR TIRES OR FOR STORAGE

The Four-In-One-Jack, an automobile invention that will save the motorist money, time, fuss and worry, will shortly be placed on the Canadian market. It is a very simple bit of mechanism, consisting of a socket or slot which is fastened to the inside of each wheel. It more than repays its purchase price of $7.50, inasmuch as it can be used with astonishing ease as a jack; as a mud hook, that will drive the car out of any hole, mud or sand in a jiffy; as a simple but effective lock; and as an ideal rest for garage or storage. The Four-In-One Jack, which is controlled by a $2,000,000 organization that has its headquarters in the Manufacturers' Trust Building at 59th Street and Broadway, is being manufactured and distributed on Long Island at the rate of 100,000 jacks a day. The Canadian Co., which has headquarters at 1780 Union Avenue, has been incorporated for $100,000 of which $75,000 is controlled by the Company allowing $25,000 worth of stock for sale to the public as a splendid investment. A. Rossitto, President of the Four-In-One Jack, is a brother of the inventor of the Four-In-One Jack. Associated with him as Vice-President is George Boyd, special representative of the Steel Co. of Canada. The Four-In-One Jack is being manufactured here at the Thomas Davidson Mfg. Co., Ltd., and will be distributed throughout the Dominion of Canada. Although the agencies for Ontario and for parts of Quebec have already been arranged, there are agencies for other districts still open. The beauty of this invention is its simplicity. With it the daintiest lady can jack a car and change a tire easily and swiftly without dirt, sweat or fuss. The inventor G. Rossitto President of the Pennsylvania Bank of New York City, hit upon this simple mechanism one stormy evening when, while on the way to his box at the Metropolitan Opera House, his car developed a flat tire. All effort to mend the trouble was fruitless but while turning into a narrow street two wheels of the car were forced to travel on the sidewalk. The wheel on this higher level gave Mr. Rossitto his idea for the Four-In-One Jack. This Four-In-One Jack will be on sale throughout Canada very shortly. Ask your garage man to let you see it. It will remove most of your automobile troubles.

LORD SWAYTHLING'S WILL

The Rt. Hon. Louis, second Baron Swaythling, of Townhall Park, Bitterne, and 28, Kensington Court, W., head of the banking firm of Samuel Montagu & Co., for some years chairman of the Federation of Synagogues, treasurer of the League of British Jews, and formerly president of the Wounded Allies' Relief Fund, who died on June 11 last, aged fifty-seven years, left unsettled personal estate provisionally sworn as of the net value of £400,000, "so far as at present can be ascertained."

His will, dated November 24, 1915, with four codicils, is a bulky document of over 140 folios. He left £25 for the purchase of a memento to each of his partners (other than his sons) in the firm of Samuel Montagu.

He expressed the desire that members of his family and friends should not wear mourning for him or observe any mourning rites for a period exceeding seven days from the date of his funeral.

He further expressed his "earnest wish and solemn injunction that no child of mine shall at any time, or under any circumstances, abandon the Jewish religion, or intermarry with a person not of the Jewish religion."

He left £100 to his brother Lionel, £125 to his nephew, Walter Hart, £25 to each godson, £1,000, all objects of national, scientific, historic or artistic interest over 100 years old, all the household and personal effects, horses, carriages, consumable stores, etc., at his London residence, and the said residence to his wife absolutely, together with the income for life from a trust fund of £125,000, or one-half of the residuary estate, whichever be the greater. He left his effects at Townhill Park, not otherwise bequeathed, to his successor in the title: £12,000 upon trust for his son, Ivor, £30,000 upon trust for each other son, £20,000 upon trust for his daughter, and, when his estate will admit of it, a further £8,000 upon trust for his son, Ivor, and £20,000 for each other son.

He nominated his sons in order of seniority to succeed him as a partner in his firm, and he left the residue of his property to his eldest son.

He directed that his children should bring into account (in their legacies above) the value of certain funds already settled upon them, and that the share of his son, Ivor, and one-half of the share of his son, Ewen, and the share of any daughter should be retained upon the usual protective trusts for their benefit, and he stated that he made these trusts for the settlement of these portions "in order to protect them from the dangers incurred by people who are not engaged in any active business life."

In a number of American cities cantors have been engaged for the high holy days at prices that would make a grand opera singer wonder why he couldn't have been born a Jew. Philadelphia's Academy of Music has been leased and a New York cantor has been engaged at a salary of $15,000. In addition ten thousand dollars is to be spent on a choir. The same cantor last year in Chicago brought in $50,000, incredible as this may sound. The Academy in Philadelphia is said to hold more people and more money will be taken in. No matter how well worth hearing the cantor is nor how soul-stirring his voice, were he to sing at some other time than the high holy days business would be slow in comparison with what he is able to drag down at the sacred season. The commercial aspect of the whole thing is certainly not in keeping with the solemnity of Rosh Hashonah and Yom Kippur and it is reprehensible that a cantor should be the centre of business arrangements that capitalize occasions assumed to be of great religious significance. Just as surprising is the fact that the cantor and his business managers are to all appearances either Orthodox or Conservative Jews—the very repositories, self-styled, of the ideals of Judaism!

* * *

Lucien Wolf, secretary of the Joint Foreign Committee in London, reported at a recent meeting of the Board of Deputies that for the first time in many months the Jewish situation in Roumania is peaceful. He thinks that the new government is apparently determined to maintain order and that the anti-Semitic party will not be represented in the new chamber as it has been almost completely destroyed by internal dissension. Mr. Wolf also said that King Ferdinand in the last few months of his life had striven hard for peace.

What difference did it make, though, whether the King strove thus in the last few months of his life or all his years together? Or whether Queen Marie went away from America with the determination to say a good word for the Jews in their hapless struggle against an anti-Semitism so strong as to be a party policy? Both had a worthy example in Queen Elizabeth, perhaps better known as Carmen Sylva, who sometimes said what she thought about the Jewish question. She may have made the anti-Semites wriggle but even she was unable to do very much actually.

Carmen Sylva was a poet who cared more about art and artists and the alleviation of suffering that she did about politics. It was once when anti-Semitism got very bad that she wrote her article on "Moses and the Jews." In it she said that, instead of rewarding the Jews for a debt to civilization, the Christians hated them. She told of how it was from a learned Jew, Bernays, a daily visitor in her childhood home, that she had learned to respect the Jews and that it was another Jew, Colonel Brociner, who advised her in all her philanthropic interests. "The Christians," wrote Carmen Sylva, "excuse their hate of the Jewish people under the pretext that the Jews crucified Christ. Let us be honest with ourselves. What would the Christians of this day and age do if Christ appeared on earth? I fear they would not sing hosannahs to Him. They would probably call Him a dangerous Socialist. If they did not mete Him out any worse punishment they would send Him to a mad house."

Had King Ferdinand and Queen Marie followed Carmen Sylva in saying kind words on behalf of the Jewish people they would have earned the gratitude of Jews everywhere but could have accomplished little, after all, against the real rulers of the country. Jews in America who strained themselves in paying homage to Queen Marie as the symbol of the Roumanian government (making asses of themselves) and who claimed they did it to impress her with the Jewish appeal, were much too optimistic about her real power and, perhaps, their own persuasive charm.

Real power was never vested in Ferdinand or Marie during any of the changes Roumania has seen in late years. Ferdinand came to the throne in 1914 and saw his country profit enormously by the war. It became the wealthiest and strongest of the Balkan states, more than doubled in population. The post-war annexations brought new blood and better educated people into the state. For a time it seemed as though the backward economic and political conditions would be partly modernized in very fact by a new constitution. Premier Vaida stood for state ownership of minerals and forests, a strong, educational system, universal suffrage—for a few months while the ruling group lost hold temporarily.

But Averescu, Jonescu, and particularly Bratiano, [illegible] owners and politicians, to-day again maintain complete ascendancy over the court in reaction and corruption. They are against reform and liberalism and in favour of holding on to the arable land and the forests and of keeping the people illiterate, unprogressive, and Jew-hating. It is these powers of darkness that pull the strings [illegible] the pawns and send out pictures of the engaging little King Michael to touch the heart of the world in a bid for good feeling toward [illegible] Roumania. Let the Jews there enjoy this sudden, strange, unnatural peace. It will last only as long as oligarchic influence can stand the pressure of such quiet.

The marriage of Miss Eleanor Pearlstein of Toronto, to Rabbi Adolph H. Finkelstein, of Ann Arbor, Michigan, was solemnized August 10. Rabbi Finkelstein is director of the Hillel Foundation at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, and on June 24 came to Toronto to officiate at the wedding ceremony of Miss Pearlstein's sister, Miss Shirley Pearlstein, to Rabbi Iser L. Freund, a former colleague of Rabbi Finkelstein's at Ann Arbor. Miss Eleanor Pearlstein was bridesmaid at the wedding, in Anshe Sholem Synagogue, Hamilton. After the wedding, Miss Pearlstein's sister and brother-in-law left for a wedding trip to Europe and she returned to Toronto. Rabbi Finkelstein remained in Canada, visiting Hamilton and Toronto frequently. On Sunday the bride of June and the groom returned from their trip abroad to find that the officiating clergyman and bridesmaid at their wedding had decided to marry and join them as they complete the honeymoon tour. Rabbi Finkelstein's home is in Goldsboro, N.C., where Mrs. Freund will live, and the bride and groom of to-night are going to join the June couple on a wedding tour to Goldsboro. Rabbi F. Isserman, of Toronto, is a friend of both Rabbi Freund and Rabbi Finkelstein, and he performed the marriage ceremony, at the home of Mrs. Louis Minden, Dunsmere Road. Several delegates to the World Federation of Education Associations also motored up to the wedding, as they were friends of the Rabbi. The house was decorated with summer flowers, and the bride, who was given away by her father, David Pearlstein, of Toronto, wore her sister's wedding gown of Chantilly lace and a veil of tulle. She carried roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Miss Bertha Minden was the bridesmaid, in French blue taffeta made in period style with an uneven hemline caught with roses, appliqued in silk. J. D. Pearlstein, of Toronto, was best man. During the service the wedding music was played by Miss Guzner, cousin of the bride. A reception was held at the house after the wedding and later Rabbi and Mrs. Finkelstein left with Rabbi and Mrs. Freund on their wedding tour. They will live in Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Shall we judge beauty and value of character by achievement?

We have many Jews in Canada occupying positions of prominence in the community. The foundation of their importance is the success which they achieved in their commercial pursuits. First they acquire wealth. Then they scatter largess and are acclaimed as philanthropists and leaders. They deserve recognition, credit. But in appraising values can it be said that men of this type—even though they be always in the public eye—are the chosen ones among us?

Dr. Schwartz was a communal leader in many ways. He was prominent in Zionist and cultural circles. It is not for his leadership or communal prestige that we speak of him so admiringly and so appreciatively. He was an outstanding figure among our younger generation because of the beautifulness of his primary relation to life. His nature, unlike that of most of our reputed leaders, was not dualistic—sordid, petty, avaricious in their major commercial interest, and indulgent and charitable in their public concerns. He approached life reverently, tendering his best and expecting the best. His manner had the flair of the natural aristocrat. He was candid, honest, fair, and he looked for broadness and freeness in the people with whom he came in contact. He had his moods of depression, bordering on the morbid. At times he rose to heights of elation. But this play of moods was always the result of his sensitiveness to the moods of life around him. He felt that life, with its multifarious colours and variation of notes and its clangor and its hectic struggles had about it a mysteriousness and a strength which were intoxicating. And he allowed himself to become intoxicated by its riotousness and its challenging depth. He responded to its excitations and suggestions with the wholesome simplicity of a child.

Jewish life in Canada is, as we know, chaotic, absurd. There is a multitude of little organizations and institutions each worshipping its little divinity, not knowing that there should be one comprehending tribal god. And there are picayune leaders who can see no farther than the boundaries of their little groups. They are not aware that Jewish leadership has an important function to perform—the function of investing Jewish life with meaning and purposiveness. Proper leadership must be blessed with vision and faith in the creative powers of the people. Schwartz appreciated that beneath the crazy whirl of our communal life there was an abiding significance. He looked for the deeper harmony that inspirited its diversities. He belonged to the small minority who yearned for beauty and dignity and completeness in Canadian Jewish life.

We have no great Jews in Canada. We have a handful of fine characters whose presence beautifies our communal life. Dr. Schwartz was certainly one of the handful of lovable characters that we possessed. Our public life will feel very keenly his untimely death.

And what tribute can his intimate friends who loved him pay to his memory? A sigh, a tear, a word of eulogy? He is dead. He should not have died

JEWISH CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES IN POLAND

The sixth conference of Jewish Co-operative Societies of Poland was recently held in Warsaw and was attended by 334 delegates from about 250 towns. The reports presented at the conference indicate a steady and most encouraging growth of these organizations. There are now 313 peoples' banks and twenty-eight middle-class co-operatives embracing twenty-one per cent. of the entire Jewish population of Poland and including artisans, small traders, merchants, manufacturers and farmers. The banks are all in good condition, having considerable capital and surplus funds. During the first quarter of the present year, nearly one million zlotys were loaned to the members. The work of organization and conduct of these institutions is credited to the Jewish distribution committee, which has made generous investment in launching this movement in Poland.

LOEW'S

Loew's will present next week, Miss Norma Shearer's latest beautiful picture, "After Midnight." This is a lavishly mounted production in which the young Canadian actress is shown to superb advantage as the central figure of a fascinating throng of Broadway habitues. The night club life of Greater Gotham is revealed with fidelity, back stage life is made a thing of realism, and the make-believe realm is shown in its most intimate moments.

Miss Shearer is supported in a thoroughly thrilling story by Laurence Gray, as the charming and handsome young fellow who steals her from the Broadway roues, and Gwen Lee, who presents a naughty but nice young vamp in her own best manner.

Lew Brice and four other big vaudeville attractions will complete an unusually good programme.

Physical development through games, sports and calisthenics—by all means. The teaching of such patriotism, which shall make for the desire to keep one's country loyal to its noblest traditions and yet make for the respect and appreciation of traditions of other nations is essential. But away with the regalia and paraphernalia which prepare the mind more than the body for the next war.

GETTING AWAY FROM THE ARTIFICIALITIES

The artificialities which city life creates flee before the contacts of nature. At summer resorts, frequently the classes and castes of our social system are laid aside and at times religious differences are forgotten. A beautiful example of this I just witnessed in the scenic Muskoka Lakes district. A Sunday evening service was held. A rabbi was the preacher. The choir was composed of members of various Christian denominations. Catholics, Baptists, Anglicans, among them an Anglican clergyman, Methodists and others were in the audience. The services were simple and sincere. A truly religious spirit was created. The artificialities of religion fled before the majesty of nature and representatives of many creeds found God together.

The municipal elections in Poland resulted in the election of 541 Jews as councillors in various towns. The Jews form more than one-third of the total number of councillors elected. The Polish Seim has thirty-five Jews in the House of Deputies and twelve Jewish Senators.

In Berlin, Germany, two national socialists, said to be ringleaders of vandals who desecrated the Jewish cemetery in Cologne, have been arrested. Anti-Jewish excesses in Bulgaria are about to be investigated by the Bulgarian Minister at Washington. The disturbances are reported to have occurred chiefly in Southern Bulgaria.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

Dr. Schwartz Drowns in Lake Erie

Was University of Toronto Graduate

Dr. Morris Schwartz, of Detroit, formerly of Toronto, was drowned Sunday, in Lake Erie. He was born in Braila, Roumania, in 1888, and was a graduate of the University of Roumania. Dr. Schwartz came to Toronto in 1902, and received the degree of Doctor of Dentistry in 1911 from the University of Toronto. He was the second Jewish doctor to graduate from the Royal Dental College. He was a member of Mount Sinai Masonic Lodge, of the National Council of the Zionist Organization of Canada and honorary secretary for the Central Division, Ontario Zionists. In 1919 he went to Palestine as a member of Hadassah medical unit and did work in Tiberias and Safed. Dr. Schwartz is survived by his parents, and three sisters, Mrs. A. Falick, Mrs. S. Rycus and Mrs. C. Kimmelman. Funeral, in Detroit, was attended by members of Mount Sinai Lodge of the Zionist Organization and of Hadassah. Those who went were Abe Cohen, Sam Factor, Dr. M. Pivnick, Dr. M. Kates, David Dunkelman, B. Laster, Max Rosen, Joseph Danson, Mrs. S. Kronick and Mrs. L. Goldoff.

Dr. M. Schwartz

When two small motor boats capsized in the lake off Willow Beach, adjoining Camp Perry, Ohio, Sunday afternoon during a windstorm, Miss Tillie Freedman, aged twenty-four; Dr. Schwartz and Robert Eighner, aged twenty-two, were drowned. Those rescued, also of Detroit, were Harry Bookstein, Seymour Whole and Samuel Eighner. These three were in a boat which was closer to shore when it overturned and Russell Fishback and Emerson Messenger, of Toledo, brought them to shore after they had clung for some time to their capsized craft. Futile efforts were made to resuscitate the other two victims by Lieut.-Col. D. V. Burkett, chief surgeon of the Ohio National Guard, and a detachment of medical troops, called from camp here. The capsizing of the two coats was witnessed from his cottage at the beach by Dr. Fred F. Heller, of Oak Harbor, who spread the alarm.

Rabbi Solomon P. Wohlgelernter, Rabbi of Vancouver, B.C., who has been in Toronto for the last five weeks visiting his parents, Rev. and Mrs. I. L. Wohlgelernter, of 27 St. Andrew Street, left last Wednesday night for Winnipeg, Man. He will spend Saturday there with his father-in-law, Chief Rabbi I. I. Kahanovitch, and then return to Vancouver. While here, Rabbi Wohlgelernter, accompanied by Edmund Scheuer and Norman Helpert, visited the Jewish Farm School at Georgetown. The Rabbi participated in the Work Educational Congress held in Toronto last week, and proposed the resolution condemning the practice of "Numerus Clausus" in the higher educational institutions of certain European countries.
